Concord Grape Wine Making Recipes The Concord grape still remains the most popular grape sold in the United States with the majority of the vineyards in Washington and New York. The varietal has been used with great frequency in producing sweet Kosher wines such as Manischewitz and Mogen David.

Concord grapes are a "slip skinned" grape, meaning that the skins slide off easily, making the grapes a bit harder to press. And the flavor of the skins is often described as "foxy". While "foxy" is difficult to describe, it is not a normal "wine" flavor, and when fermented it can give the wine a strong chemical taste that is a bit woody.
