The relationship between Jews and Muslims has been a flashpoint that affects stability in the Middle East and has consequences around the globe.

It examines the impact on Jews living under Muslim rule, the rise of Zionism and the creation of the State of Israel. It looks at the situation of Jews living in Muslim lands today, and the lives in Israel and elsewhere of those Jews who left Muslim lands in the mass exodus after 1948, when Israel was established. It is also a moving account of mutual tolerance between Muslims and Jews that provides a perspective on current events and a template for the future.
