Whatever hill we try to climb, we're over it by fifty and should that hill involve entertainment or athletics we're finished long before. But if younger is better

Inquisitively interesting view, sometimes raw, of the creative mind into old age. In LASTINGNESS, Nicholas Delbanco, one of America's most celebrated men of letters, profiles great geniuses in the fields of visual art, literature, and music-Monet, Verdi, O'Keeffe, Yeats, among others - searching for the answers to why some artists' work diminishes with age, while others' reaches its peak.

The book describes the creative achievements in old age of a number of famous persons in the fields of writing, music, and painting. The tales are interesting in themselves, and invite reflection on the question of a happy and productive old age, whether one is famous or not. It's a good subject, to which he brings a lot of both information and reflection. Definitely recommended.
